                        It can... but there is a frequency factor to consider.

                        Present circumstances are not a function of innate differences, but passin shifts that may well emerge elsewhere. Be vigilant.

                        i get what you are saying... and hopefully the shift passes quickly and culture learns. but this bump is intense with little end in sight.
