

Exhibit D

Sent: Sat, 5 Sep 2015 18:07:28 -0400
From: Peter Todd <pete@petertodd.org>
To: isis <isis@patternsinthevoid.net>
Subject: Re: encrypted

On Sat, Sep 05, 2015 at 08:53:44AM +0000, isis wrote:

> Peter Todd transcribed 3.2K bytes:
> > I need to have a demo of basically this put Tor consensus in the > > blockchain idea by the end of the month for a client. (actually, two > > clients) So I've got some funding!
> >
> > I'm in SF next on the 20th or 21st or so; want to sit down and make this > > happen?
>
> Oh no! That sounds awesome? But I leave on the 20th for the Tor > developer meeting in Berlin. Although, given enough funding... you're > totally welcome to crash it like time before last! \o/

Oh! So I'm only going to be in SF because this conf I'm going to in Nevada is flying everyone to/form there on a private jet... and after that conf, I have to be in Batumi, Georgia for a conference on Oct 8th, so going to Berlin in between is perfectly reasonable so long as I can get a cheap place to stay.

> > Re: moxie, another thing my clients need is a very simple VM platform > > for execution of smartcontract crap. For instance a client I met with > > earlier this week has this horrible glaring security hole where the > > contracts on their system are raw Python code with some shitty security > > isolation - basically their whole system is vulnerable to internal > > attacks by their own programmers. :/
>
> Huh. That would take me a minute to give serious thought to. I'm on > an island right now. There's awesome people and pretty trees == > uninclined to think about if those peeps should programme in Idris or > not.

Hahah, well, you still manage to help there, as I hadn't had Idris on my list of alternatives. :)

--

'peter'[:-1]@petertodd.org 000000000000000010f9e95aff6454fedb9d0a4b92a4108e9449c507936f9f18